BOUNDARIES – A PLACE ... TO MEET ... TO DEVELOP ... TO DEFINE IDENTITY

Transactional Analysts Will Gather in Berlin for 2017 World TA Conference

27-29 July 2017

Technical University

Berlin

Germany

Berlin is a place where boundaries and borders have played a vital role in history, both to limit and to protect. For decades, peace and war were close neighbors, and people there still know only too well that boundaries mean limits, challenges, and chances. For 28 years they were faced with the Wall, the fact of people being shot when they wanted to be free, the threat of the Cold War. And in the face of all of that, they experienced the support of many people all over the world. It was there that John F. Kennedy expressed his emotions about the city and its inhabitants in his famous cry of solidarity: "Ich bin ein Berliner!"

Now, as we celebrate more than 25 years since the fall of the Wall, we are still faced with enormous challenges in a world in which the rich and poor are increasingly separated, in which meeting places are often virtual, in which identity and the search for it is hard work. Being safe in managing the uncertainty of our world and supporting people in gaining this competency is our challenge.

Creating, maintaining, and ultimately opening borders is part of the history and memory of Berlin, and as we gather there, we will be asking what are the meaning of borders and boundaries to us? How do boundaries help us to define our identity and differentiate ourselves from others, on the one hand, or establish contact with them, on the other? Is it possible to define identity without borders or by crossing borders?

More specifically, how do transactional analysts respond to these challenges and take social responsibility? What answers, tools, and perspectives can we offer? How can we use our theory and practice to build a safe foundation for meeting the needs of our increasingly connected but fractious world? In what areas is TA recognized and where is it not? In what areas do we think it is important to be recognized in the future? Should there be limits and borders between fields, and should these be essential, hard, or flexible? What does it mean to identify as a transactional analyst?

We, as transactional analysts, may be able to contribute to finding answers—as individuals and as communities—to these and related questions. We invite you to join us in this process and in so doing to express your enthusiasm for transactional analysis and its potential role in the world.

The 2017 World Conference is being organized by the European Association for Transactional Analysis (EATA), the ITAA, and the Federation of Transactional Analysis Associations (FTAA) and hosted by the Deutschen Gesellschaft für Transaktionsanalyse (the German Association for Transactional Analysis or DGTA). We all welcome you to Berlin!

PROGRAM

Keynote Speeches

Prof. Dr. Günter Abel is a professor of philosophy who has specialized in research on the integration of knowledge and identity. He will consider how multiple goals in different aspects of life create identity and help the formation of the self and how identity becomes a manifestation in the psychodynamics of clients. Dr. Abel is professor of philosophy at the TU Berlin.

Kazim Erdogan will describe a project to help Turkish men recognize the need for more development and education so they have greater awareness through maps, concepts, and tools. Mr. Erdogan, who was born in Turkey, holds a diploma in psychology and sociology and specializes in the integration of migrants. He has run a successful program for Turkish fathers who came to Germany from their country of origin. For his involvement in that enterprise, he was awarded with a medal by the Federal Republic of Germany.

MESSAGE FROM THE MAYOR OF BERLIN

Dear Transactional Analysts:

The 2017 Transactional Analysis World Conference is a major international gathering that brings specialists together every 3 years for an exchange of experience. It will be a great honor for Germany's capital city to host this event. As one of the world's leading trade fair and congress venues, our city offers ideal conditions for your conference. Berlin's many advantages include its modern hotels, its incredibly varied and diverse restaurants, and an extensive and convenient public transportation system as well as excellent transport links to and from the city. Berlin's unique atmosphere and its wealth of attractions also play their part in making every stay here an event. And don't forget to look at the city's rich and varied cultural calendar. From theater to opera, from classical music to jazz, from ancient sculpture to contemporary art, Berlin has top-flight alternatives for every taste. As a result, I am confident that you will feel at home in Berlin. We will be delighted to welcome you in July 2017!

Michael Müller
Governing Mayor of Berlin

TU University

The conference program events (the opening ceremonies, keynotes, workshops, etc.) will be held at Technische Universität Berlin (TU). With almost 34,000 students, this historic university is one of Germany's largest and most internationally renowned technical universities. The main campus is situated in Berlin's Charlottenburg-Wilmersdorf district in the heart of the City West area. Campus Charlottenburg is the largest contiguous inner-city university campus in Europe and is situated directly on Ernst Reuter Square, not far from the Zoologische Garten station and Kurfürstendamm Avenue. The official address of the Conference Centre TU Berlin is Technische Universität Berlin (TU) Straße des 17. Juni 135 and 136 10623 Berlin.

ACCOMMODATIONS

There are many hotels, pensions, and bed and breakfasts in Berlin. All hotels can be booked via the Kuoni link on the conference website with a best price guarantee. Please follow the instructions on the site, which will ask for your email address to make sure there is no typing error and to identify the person who is booking. The hotels closest to the university are: Wyndham Berlin Excelsior, Savoy Berlin, Novum Hotel Gates, Ibis, Hotel Otto, Arcona Living, Hotel am Steinplatz, Hotel Aletto, and Motel One.

TRAVEL AND TRANSPORTATION

Visas, Passports, and Letters of Invitation

European Union citizens only require their national identity papers to travel to Germany. Citizens from most other countries will need a valid passport. They are encouraged to contact their local German embassy or consulate to inquire about the necessity of a visa. For information about visa requirements and the addresses of German missions, visit the conference website at https://tawc2017.berlin/en/location/arrival/ . On request, the chairperson of the conference will be happy to send a personal letter of invitation to enable participants to obtain supporting funds or visas to attend the conference. However, such letters cannot be considered an offer of financial support by the organizers.

Public Transportation

Berlin's public transit system will take you almost anywhere you want to go, taxis are generally easy to catch, and bike rentals make it possible for you to tour the city as you please. For information about the public transit system in Berlin, please visit the conference website at https://tawc2017.berlin/en/location/arrival/ . There are different apps available on the website of www.visitBerlin.de . The two stations near the conference venue at the Technische Universität Berlin (TU) university are Ernst-Re-

SOCIAL EVENTS

Examiners' Dinner

There will be a special dinner for examiners on Tuesday 25 July in a relaxed, informal setting. The venue, Zur Nolle, is close to the famous Friedrichstaße (the famous shopping street) and is representative of typical 1920s Berlin. More than 100 years ago, the first Berlin beer hall opened its doors in these S-Bahn archways, and the location has been home to good, old-fashioned hospitality ever since. The restaurant is ideally located in the heart of Berlin. Under Nolle's 6-meter-high ceiling, there is a symphony of marble, mirrors, leather furnishings, and Art Deco paintings that orchestrate the perfect atmosphere for a blend of hearty fine dining.

Festive Evening

As writer Jean Paul said in the 1800s, "Berlin is more a part of the world than a city." And to celebrate that character, we are delighted to announce that we successfully booked a sensational and quintessential Berlin location for what we are referring to as our "Festive Evening" on Friday night. The site reflects how Berliners have had to develop creative solutions to manage a once-divided city. In this case, an old goods station has been repurposed by creative adaptation into an event location par excellence. Because Berlin is full of many options for good food, and because we wanted to share the festive evening with as many conference participants as possible, people may join us either with or without dinner. The menu will offer typical Berlin dishes (don't worry, no Curry-Wurst) as well as vegetarian and on-request dishes for those with allergies (as much as possible). There will be a no-host bar and music for listening and/or dancing. Berliners and TA people both know how to celebrate, and there is no closing time in Berlin! We also want to welcome our guests with their music, so we will be contacting you to ask for special musical wishes. The site, Von Greifswald, can be reached via Lilli-Henoch-Straße, directly at the urban railway and tram stations Griefswalder Str. (ring line). Cost: 55€ with dinner at 19:00 Uhr; 35€ without dinner at 20:30 Uhr.

TOURS

Jewish Museum Tours

We will be offering two tours of the Jewish Museum in Berlin on Wednesday 26 July at 6 pm.

1. With Seven-League-Boots Through the Museum: This 60-90 minute tour will seek out places and themes that highlight the primary features of the exhibition—"A Journey Through German Jewish History"—and offers visitors an overview of the history of Jewish settlements and culture in Germany from late antiquity through the present. Attention will be paid to selected outstanding and characteristic objects in their cultural and historical context, and visitors are invited to further explore the museum on their own after the tour. Meet by the museum, Lindenstrasse 9-14, 10969 Berlin, at 6 pm (U1, U6 Hallesches Tor). Cost: 15€.

2. Architectural Observations: This 60-90 minute tour will focus on Daniel Libeskind's new museum building, which has given a challenging architectural form to the history of Jews in Germany. The history of Jewish building reaches back over several centuries and is closely entwined with the broader history of settlement and housing in Germany. Construction, building restrictions, vandalism, and destruction: Every chapter in the story of Jewish building in Germany offers illuminating insight into the historical context of Jewish life through changing times. To appreciate how modern architecture can reflect this history, one should not miss the opportunity to study Libeskind's museum from inside and out. Meet by the museum, Lindenstrasse 9-14, 10969 Berlin, at 6 pm (U1, U6 Hallesches Tor). Cost: 15€.

Walk Along the Wall

This 2-hour guided tour along the historic Berlin Wall in the center of Berlin will take place on Wednesday 26 July.

We will meet our guide in front of the Tränenpalast (Palace of Tears), which is located at the former border between East and West Berlin, and follow the path through the center of Berlin where the Wall was once situated. We will see abandoned bridges, ghost stations, an unofficial memorial for victims of the Wall, and more. The tour will take us to the new government district, which is extended over the former border between east and west and to the famous Brandenburger-Tor, the best known symbol of divided Germany. We will also visit the Potsdamer Platz, a district that disappeared after 1945 as a result of the Cold War. We will end at the largest existing part of the Wall in the center of Berlin. Meet at the Tränenpalast (Reichstagufer 17, 10117 Berlin) at 6 pm (S and U station Friedrichstrasse).

Tour on the River Spree

This tour on the paddle steamer Europa will take place on Thursday 27 July. We will travel through the inner city of Berlin, the government district with the Reichstag, historical Berlin with the Nikolai district, through the Mühlendammschleise, past the East Side Gallery, Oberbaumbrücke, Mediaspree, Treptow, Insel der Jugend (island of youth) toward the Rummelsburger Bay, and then back to the Holsteiner Ufer (close to S-Bahn Bellevue). The steamer has a large saloon, two funnels, a wonderful upper deck, and a big red paddlewheel in the stern. The trip will begin around 19:30 at Holsteiner Ufer 32 in 10557 Berlin (close to Bellevue station) and ends around 22:30 at the departure point. Drinks can be purchased at the ship's bar (cash payment), and we will contact you regarding food wishes.

Reflecting on 47 Years of ITAA Membership

by Ken Mellor

On 25 November 2016, Ken Mellor was officially presented with the 2016 Muriel James Living Principles Award by ITAA Secretary Mandy Lacy on behalf of the ITAA. The ceremony took place in Auckland, New Zealand, during the ANZTAA Conference. As described in her nomination of Ken for the award, Adrienne Lee wrote that "Ken is a man of outstanding qualities who has made a significant and lasting contribution to transactional analysis both in the advancement of theory and in the integrity displayed in his life and practice. . . . He has not only taught and practiced the principles of OKness in all aspects of his life and teaching, he has also focused on the application of these principles in the wider world community and our planet. He promotes the principle of Oneness that invites a process of unifying conflicting forces in ourselves, others, and the world and so expands our responsibility to promote joyous living."

In his acceptance speech, Ken said, "The most important part of this award for me is the 'Living Principles' part. With transactional analysis, I learned all sorts of things that were far more than TA. I've also done a lot of learning in a lot of different areas. The value of that to me was that it was never just to know what I was learning from the books and people. The value was to its contribution to me as a whole person, so I could live what I was learning. And my way was always to live it. . . . I want to say . . . thank you to the ITAA, the many hundreds of people who have contributed to my well-being and aliveness, . . . to Muriel James for making the award available, and to all those involved in choosing me as the recipient."

We congratulate Ken on his award and share his thoughts here on his many years as an ITAA member.

I have just returned home to Australia from the Aotearoa New Zealand Transactional Analysis Association (ANZTAA) Conference in Auckland, New Zealand, which was held from 24-27 November. I was there to receive the 2016 Muriel James Living Principles Award, but I benefitted much more broadly than that. The whole conference was an incredible microcosm of what we value as transactional analysis practitioners in so many different areas of living. The event epitomized many of the values we share as members of the ITAA and, more broadly, as members of the extensive worldwide TA network that now exists. In addition to the ITAA, there are active regional associations in Europe, Australia, New Zealand, Brazil, India, South Asia, Japan, Mexico, South Africa, Turkey, and the United States. Many individuals and small groups are also actively using TA privately around the world, and their involvement contributes to our presence in the world.

I first joined the association in 1970 after writing to Eric Berne. I asked him for information about how I could learn more than by reading the six books that I could find back then in Australia. My joining the ITAA was his idea.

I did not know then that he had started the association in 1964 and that its members were already running TA 101s and Clinical Membership and Teaching Membership training courses, with examinations and precisely formulated standards. These courses were available from individual teachers and in several training institutes around the country. Two annual conferences—one in the summer and one in the winter—offered other ways for TA people to get together and share their ideas and excitement.

My enthusiastic response to reading several books and my hunger for more was typical back then as transactional analysis burst into the lives of everyday people, including psychotherapists, counselors, teachers, business people, and others. It was a beautiful and exciting time.

A major feature of this movement—and one actively fostered by Eric Berne from the beginning—was the development of new TA theory and associated practices that made a real difference in people's lives. He linked this type of creativity with an emphasis on clarity, simplicity, effectiveness, and illustrations or diagrams. At the 2016 ANZTAA conference, we were all exposed to these values as participants presented work connected to a variety of areas.

Away from the papers and presentations, many other TA values were apparent, too: direct communication, respect for one another, caring interest for those in need, having lots of fun, and sharing our interests. There was, as well, much discussion of and concern about planetary survival. In true TA style, this challenged each of us to commit to taking supportive action, no matter how small.

In my opinion, all of what was best in TA practice and living came together among those who attended this conference. There was a quiet attentiveness to each other that pervaded the whole event. The organizers did a brilliant job, too, caring for us with tender attention to what we needed. We were all accounted for and recognized.

What we share with each other is truly beautiful.

Exciting Partnership Agreement Announcement

Regular readers of The Script will know that as part of restyling ourselves as a networking organization, the ITAA has been exploring the possibility of creating formal partnership agreements with other TA organizations around the world. I am delighted to announce that from 1 January 2017, the first formally contracted agreement is in force. The ITAA and the South African TA Association (SATAA) are now formal partners. It is intended that there will be more such agreements made with like-minded TA organizations during 2017 and beyond. Details of this historic first partnership contract with our friends in South Africa and future plans for the wider partnership project will appear in a later edition of The Script.

Errata

We regret that in the title of Annie Cariapa's In Memoriam article in the December 2016 issue of The Script, we incorrectly gave the name "Fr. Frank Nunn" when it should have been "Fr. Hank Nunn" (as he was correctly identified in the article itself). Our apologies.
