TRANSACTIONAL ANALYSTS FOR SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Being Present and Available With Refugees and Prisoners

A Conversation Between Steff Oates and Sally Holligan

Steff Oates

Sally Holligan

Steff Oates (SO): Thank you for agreeing to talk with us about your recent travels to work in refugee camps in France and Greece as well as your visits to a prisoner on death row with whom you have been corresponding. How did these projects come about?

Sally Holligan (SH): The work with refugees began over lunch with a homeopathy colleague and friend about a year ago. She told me about the work of a small charity called Homeopaths Supporting Refugees. We both decided we were up for it and that we'd be good team. Writing to someone on death row was stimulated by hearing about a charity called Human Rights that provides you with the name and address of an inmate to write to.

SO: I think of this work as outreach; would you describe it that way?

SH: Yes, I see both projects as reaching beyond what is familiar, what I already know, which is something I love to do. My interest in death row began with a pull to understand the extremes of human experience and how people cope in desperate situations. The man I began writing to, whom I will call "Danny," was in prison accused of murder. The relationship and rapport we have developed over the past 5 years through regular correspondence has been rewarding and enriching for me. Danny is incarcerated near Houston, and on a recent transcontinental flight, I was able to stop off there to visit him for 10 hours over three days. He told me about himself, his history, his reflections, and how after 17 years in prison, his attitude has changed from defiance to taking responsibility for who he is. Later I received a letter from him saying, "I returned to my cell and recounted every detail of our 10 hours of conversation. It was so awesome. In my mind's eye, all I could see was you waving goodbye." I know our time together is the only visit he'll have this year.

For me, the link between Danny as a death row inmate and the refugees I met is that these are people who have been given the message that nothing about them is worthwhile or welcome. The door is closed, no offer of hope, no possibility of a pathway forward. Because of my own childhood experience, I know what it's like to receive that kind of message. But I also know the feeling of holding on to a strong conviction that it's always too early to give up hope. In TA we would call that physis.

SO: I know that as well as being a Certified Transactional Analyst (P) you are a qualified homeopath. I wonder how your knowledge and training in each support you in such potentially heart-wrenching situations.

SH: I find homeopathy useful in acute trauma situations. We encountered refugees in Athens who longed to have their stories and experiences heard, but talking about what they had been through sometimes left them retraumatized. We found that certain homeopathic remedies were effective in deescalating their distress and agitation, so yes, my psychotherapy skills and knowledge of remedies did complement each other in that setting. I also found my Zen studies to be a major support on these trips. When I feel outraged at the injustice and inhumanity of what's happening in front of me, it's useful to return to the philosophy of "It's not my job here to like or dislike what is going on; it is my job to be present and available."

SO: Tell us a little about some of the experiences that impacted you the most.

SH: All refugees have been through extreme experiences, and hearing about those on the news is completely different from sitting with people who have been there and want you to understand the impact on them personally. I recall a beautiful young man in his late twenties who wept as he told me of his journey from Cameroon to Greece. It began on foot and with him being arrested, blindfolded, bound, and beaten for days. It included crossing the Sahara and holding a companion as she died. Eventually, he took a boat to Turkey, but as they landed they were met by police gunfire. He described jettisoning his few belongings and running for his life, ending up alone in a dark forest with nothing. I was moved by his courage, spirit, and capacity to endure and keep going.

> "In these situations, I often encountered the best of humanity. Among the refugees I saw many small acts of kindness and sharing from people who have very little. The honesty, openness, and gratitude we received was deeply moving, as was the courage and generosity of the volunteers."

Another young volunteer in Athens described watching a 10-year-old drawing a picture while speaking in a completely deadpan voice about watching his family being dismembered. The volunteer said it left her with an eerie chill that she didn't know how to process.

One morning in Paris we watched the police use mechanical shovels to clear away refugees' tents and belongings. A man we had seen the day before approached us and said, "I still have my remedies." He pulled them from his pocket and asked us again to explain what each one was for. In the face of more devastating loss, this seemed a strange thing to do, yet I realized he was finding a connection to us and a reason to keep going. Then a young man who had helped us the day before—intelligent, with so much to offer, fluent in five languages—approached us. He had been an interpreter for the West, which meant a death sentence from the Taliban. As he watched the mechanical shovel, he told us of his complete loss of hope and how he felt that after so many setbacks, his only option was to return to Afghanistan and be shot.

In these situations, I often encountered the best of humanity. Among the refugees I saw many small acts of kindness and sharing from people who have very little. The honesty, openness, and gratitude we received was deeply moving, as was the courage and generosity of the volunteers. Of course, there are factions and manipulative characters within the refugee groups, but I did not personally encounter any. And rather than returning home exhausted, I returned feeling fully present, enlivened, and blessed.

SO: Eric Berne was also a great traveler and was treated with suspicion by his own country because of his interest in the worldwide community. In 2010, Claude Steiner wrote, "Berne may have been silenced regarding the highly charged controversies of the times, but in his theory and practice his politics remained deeply populist, anti-elitist, libertarian, and egalitarian" (p. 213). I assume that your attraction to TA was based on some of these principles, which, like Berne, you carry out into the world.

SH: Yes, those principles are central to my philosophy and approach to life. TA is the perfect fit for me. "I'm OK, You're OK" is my guiding ethos. I love being part of a community that holds this philosophy, which is something I didn't get in my family of origin. Some people have expressed horror that I would invest in a relationship with someone convicted of murder. I don't subscribe to a theory of goodies and baddies. I'm perpetually interested in how and why people have ended up where they are, doing what they do, their experience of that, and what the route out might be. My colleague and I plan to return to one of the Greek islands where so many refugees are still arriving . We are looking for a project where our particular skill set is welcomed so that we can invest in and regularly return to one place.

SO: Much like your meeting with Danny, my conversation with you will continue to resonate. I may not be returning to a cell with a death threat over my head, but I wonder sometimes if we all can return to a deadening of ourselves, away from the presence you describe as part of your Zen philosopy. I am hoping that we in the TA community will get to hear more about your travels as you work to make an impact in our troubled world. Thank you for what you are doing and for being willing to start this dialogue.

Nominations Sought for ITAA Awards

The ITAA invites you to consider nominating a worthy recipient for the 2018 Eric Berne Memorial Award (EBMA). The following information and materials must be submitted to the EBMA Committee, c/o Lis Heath (email below). All documents must be submitted by email in electronic form (Microsoft Word or Acrobat PDF).

1. Name(s) of author(s) nominated

2. Publication citation: Full reference for journal article, book, or publication in which the contribution being nominated has been published

3. Area of contribution: Specify one of the following categories as the area in which you think the most significant contribution has been made: (a) theory, (b) research, (c) applications, or (d) other areas not covered by these.

4. A brief title for the contribution: For example, the concept in theory, a descriptive title for the research project, the specific practice application, or a title for some other relevant area

5. A nominators' statement (1500 words maximum) supporting the nomination as an original and highly significant contribution to transactional analysis in the designated area. This statement must include discussions of the following:

- The originality and innovation of the contribution within transactional analysis
- The relationship to previous work in transactional analysis and related theories or fields of application, including research where applicable
- Evidence of the impact the contribution has had on the development of the field of transactional analysis
- Any other statements about the contribution that need to be considered by the committee in the opinion of the person(s) making the nomination

Each nomination needs to be supported by a single nominators' statement. If more than one individual is making the nomination, the nominating group will prepare a common statement and select a nominators' representative.

6. Individual, group, or organization making the nomination: Please supply the name, address, telephone number(s), fax number(s), and email address of the nominator (or nominators' representative) the EBMA committee may contact if additional information or material is required to consider the nomination fully.

Eric Berne

7. Copies of the publication(s): One electronic copy of the article(s) or book chapter(s) in which the contribution being nominated appears must accompany the nomination. If the article or book chapter was written in a language other than English, then an English translation must be included, along with the publication(s) in the original language. No more than three articles and/or book chapters may be submitted.

8. Notification of the nominee: It is the responsibility of the person(s) making the nomination for the award to notify the author(s) of his or her intention to do so and to provide him or her with a copy of the written materials submitted to the EBMA Committee. The nominator is to verify to the committee that he or she has done so either by submitting a copy of the letter to the nominee or a statement to that effect. Without this verification, the nomination will not be accepted, except in those instances in which the award would be made posthumously.

9. Unpublished material and work published after December 2014 are not eligible for nomination at this point.

The deadline for Eric Berne Memorial Award nominations is 1 December 2017. Send nominations to Lis Heath at lis.heath@gmail.com For more details on making nominations, visit here.

The ITAA Research Award was established to recognize an individual(s) or team who has made a major contribution to research in any field of transactional analysis. The recipient(s) need not be an ITAA member(s). The award is given for published and peer-reviewed research in any of the fields in which transactional analysis is applied, preferably in indexed or impacted journals. Nominated work may focus on the effectiveness of current theory and practice, but research will be the necessary focus rather than simply an option. Send nominations for the ITAA Research Award to chair Biljana van Rijn at biljana.vanrijn@metanoia.ac.uk . For more information, visit here . The deadline for the ITAA Research Award is 1 January 2018.

The ITAA Service Award was established to recognize members of the ITAA who have made a significant contribution to the advancement of the ITAA and to its development as an organization that promotes transactional analysis internationally, supports its members, and offers a social benefit to the public. Honorees will be recognized for their commitment, the nature of their service, and the "I'm OK, You're OK" manner in which they conducted themselves in the process. The nominee will have demonstrated a generous spirit of service, responsibility, and effectiveness in his or her contribution to the life of the ITAA. The deadline for the ITAA Service Award is 1 January 2018.

The Hedges Capers Humanitarian Award was established to recognize ITAA members who have made significant, enduring contributions to humanity in keeping with the ideals and ethics of the ITAA. These contributions are primarily seen as activities that promote the welfare of humankind, especially through the alleviation or elimination of pain and suffering. ITAA members who make such contributions often do so at the cost of personal risk and/or sacrifice. The humanitarian activities may form a lifelong pattern or be expressed in a single, widely noted occurrence. The deadline for the Capers Award is 1 January 2018.

The Muriel James Living Principles Award honors ITAA members who have advanced the growth of transactional analysis by personal example as well as by contributions of an exceptional and lasting nature. Personal example involves consistently living the principles of transactional analysis, which includes, but is not limited to, clear Adult thinking, joyful creativity, compassionate ethics, and a lack of gaminess in transactions with others. Such a person models egalitarian relationships and promotes an "I'm OK, You're OK" atmosphere in both professional and personal arenas. The nominee will have demonstrated commitment, concern, and caring for both individuals and the world community and will be active in the international advancement of the principles of transactional analysis either professionally or personally. The deadline for the James Award is 1 January 2018.

The Robert and Mary Goulding Social Justice Award was established to recognize individuals who have broadened the application of transactional analysis through their teaching, training, writing and/or direct professional work in the promotion of social justice. The nominee will have advanced through professional work and personal modeling the core principles of the Gouldings' theory: self-determination, personal responsibility, direct action, and affirming relationships. The nominee will have contributed, in his or her own way, by any or many of the following: disclosing unfairness, challenging injustices, protecting unfair practices, confronting perpetrators, questioning values that support injustice, enabling understanding and respect, encouraging equalitarian values, facilitating awareness of institutionalized injustice, funding social movements, and even mounting public protests. The deadline for the Goulding Social Justice Award is 1 January 2018.

Any ITAA member may suggest another member for the Service, Capers, James, or Goulding awards by submitting in writing a detailed nomination that includes the nominee's name along with a narrative account of the reasons the individual deserves recognition, attaching all relevant documentation. The guidelines for making nominations for all of these awards are posted online at http://itaaworld.org/itaa-awards. Send nominations for the Service, James, Capers, and Goulding awards to ITAA Secretary Sumithra Sharatkumar at sumithrask@gmail.com .

The Theme: With political, social and economic impact of globalization, and ever increasing diversity we are caught on different points of the cultural continuum from the 'mixed salad' to the 'melting pot' – part of 'The Dance of Culture'.

Can this metaphor inspire us transactional analysts to explore and, if needed, change our roles in this dance of culture and invite others to join us? India with its diverse cultures invites YOU to "The Dance of Culture".

The City: Ernakulam*, the commercial capital of Kerala, and the eastern, mainland portion of the city of Kochi (erstwhile Cochin) served by an international airport, fine communication facilities, excellent accommodation, modern amenities and a lot of attractive tourist places gives a breathtaking experience for its visitors and settlers.

Kochi is a fascinating blend of cultures. From time immemorial, it has been the favorite destination of globe-trotters and explorers. Blessed by one of the finest natural harbors in the world, Kochi has been eulogised as the Queen of the Arabian Sea. In and around Kochi are several cities of monumental value, but step into Fort Kochi, and you are in a totally different world. The Chinese fishing nets, the Jewish Synagogue, the Dutch palace, the Portuguese and British Architecture, all are the unique features of Kochi.

Appreciation to Long-Time Members

Below are the names of those individuals who are long-time ITAA members, some of them for more than 40 years. I thank them on behalf of us all for their dedication and loyalty to our global transactional analysis community. The ITAA is a direct membership organization, and we can only move forward on the basis of the continued participation and active involvement of our members. It is particularly important for us to acknowledge and honor the people who stay with us. As long-time supporters, these people have enabled our organization to continue its mission. I look forward to sharing the ITAA's development with them for many years to come.

- Diane Salters, ITAA President
