Looking Forward to 2019

by Diane Salters

The beginning of a new year seems a good time to thank our loyal members for their continuing interest in and support for the ITAA. Organizations such as ours are only as robust and effective as the contributions of their members, whether financial, in the form of service, or in the spirit of commitment they bring to our community.

I send a particular vote of thanks to all who answered our 2018 membership survey, thereby providing useful information (see report in the December Script) that we continue to process for further inspiration to take us into the year ahead.

Personally, it has been a real pleasure to serve as ITAA President over this past year. It is a demanding job, but having a team such as the one we have had on the board and its various committees has made it very rewarding. Sadly, our vice president of development, Izumi Kadomoto, has had to resign because of her expanding work commitments. She has done an absolutely amazing job of improving the effectiveness of our website and service to members. She will be sadly missed. The board decided to appoint Deepak Dhananjaya to serve out the rest of Izumi's term. He previously chaired the membership committee and has worked closely with Izumi, so we are confident that there will be minimal disruption to the work in hand. That work includes the development of the membership directory, the expansion of the supervision project, and further improvements to our website—all things that members asked for in the survey.

> "Organizations such as ours are only as robust and effective as the contributions of their members."

The other big change for 2019 is that Bill Cornell will no longer be serving as one of the coeditors of the Transactional Analysis Journal. Fortunately, he has agreed to remain in the position of consulting editor as liaison to Routledge and the editor

TAJ Earns Scopus Acceptance

We are delighted to announce that the Transactional Analysis Journal has been accepted for inclusion into Scopus, the largest abstract and citation database of peer-reviewed literature, including scientific journals, books, and conference proceedings. Scopus is a key index and will be helpful in raising the Journal's profile. It will also make it much easier to track citation trends and to work toward increasing these sufficiently for Web of Science to also list the TAJ in its Emerging Sources Citation Index.

Scopus can be used by researchers to determine the impact of specific authors, articles/documents, and journals. Updated daily, it delivers the most comprehensive overview of the world's research output in the fields of science, technology, medicine, the social sciences, and the arts and humanities. It contains over 50 million records and includes over 23,700 peer-reviewed journals. (For more information, visit here .)

In the letter confirming acceptance of the TAJ, the Scopus Content Selection and Advisory Board commented as follows:

- The journal has scholarly relevance as evidenced by citations in other journals currently covered by Scopus.
- In general, the content of the articles is consistent with the scope and aims of the journal.
- The articles are consistently of high academic quality, consistent with the journal's stated aims.
- The articles are generally well written and understandable.
- The journal has clear aims and scope/journal policies that are consistent with the journal's content.
- Peer review type is clearly stated and is supported by appropriate reviewer guidelines.

It takes about 3 months for Scopus to set up a new title and request the data feed from the publisher, and they update their source list only three times a year. So, we can expect to see the Journal properly listed and indexed later in 2019.

of the Routledge "Innovations in Transactional Analysis" book series. It is impossible to quantify the contribution that Bill has made to the ITAA over many years. This includes the ways that he has been instrumental in drawing together great editorial teams and providing leadership that has enabled the TAJ to evolve into the publication that it is today with an expanding and growing reputation in the social sciences.

Also going forward, we gratefully acknowledge EATA's financial support for the Transactional Analysis Journal. The contract has now been signed and comes into effect this year and for the following 4 years. Continuing this theme of cooperation, the international task force of members of the executive committees of our two associations has been established and is in the process of refining our terms of reference, our task, and our time frame for the creation of one organization to serve our worldwide TA community.

In this and all other matters, I am working closely with Elana Leigh as president-elect so that when she steps into the role of president at the August conference in Raleigh, she will be fully informed. I will, after that, continue to serve as a active past president to help bring our vision to fruition.

Meanwhile, I wish you all an inspiring, creative, and fulfilling 2019.

2018 TAJ Hard-Copy Bound Volume Has Been Mailed

We are excited to announce that the first bound volume of four issues (for the year 2018) has been mailed by Routledge/Taylor & Francis to members who are due copies (everyone except student, retired, and emeritus members). Watch for your copy to arrive in the mail, and if it does not within a reasonable amount of time (by early March), please confirm that your membership was up to date at the time of mailing (check online and/or with Ken Fogleman at ken@itaa-net.org). If it was and your membership category includes the hard copy, please contact Jacqui Tearle at Routledge (societydata@tandf.co.uk) to arrange for a replacement copy. They will fill orders as long as there are copies in stock, so make sure to contact them as soon as you suspect yours did not arrive.

January TAJ Online Soon

We are pleased to start the New Year with the publication of the first issue of 2019 sometime this month. Coeditor Bill Cornell writes:

> It was nearly 50 years ago that Berne founded the Transactional Analysis Journal to ensure the future of his model and its ongoing evolution. It had always been his vision that transactional analysis would be a means by which people could improve the quality of life wherever they lived and worked. One result of that vision was that TA has found wide application in educational and organizational settings as well as in psychotherapy and counseling. The articles gathered in this issue of the TAJ reflect that range of applications.

The January issue includes the following articles plus two book reviews:

The Life Script Trilogy: Acceptance Speech on Receiving the 2018 Eric Berne Memorial Award
Richard G. Erskine

The Parent Ego State as a Developmental Achievement: A View from Social-Cognitive Transactional Analysis
Susanna Bianchini and Carla de Nitto

Using Transactional Analysis to Understand Workplace Bullying

In his letter from the coeditor, Bill also announced his changing role in relation to the TAJ:

> The end of 2018 also marks my stepping down as a member of the coeditorial team of the Transactional Analysis Journal after having served in that position for 15 years and as a member of the review board for many years prior to that. We have a strong team, and it is time for me to step aside to make space for new leadership. However, the editorial team and the ITAA Board of Trustees have agreed that I not leave the Journal altogether. I will remain on with the title of "Consulting Editor" and will be the primary liaison with the Routledge editorial team.
> I am extremely proud of all that we have accomplished with the TAJ during my tenure as a coeditor. We have a highly functioning editorial team at this point, and with the brilliant and relentless competence and dedication of Robin Fryer as managing editor, we have developed the TAJ into an internationally recognized, scholarly journal extending its reach outside of the transactional analysis community. We are now working with Routledge to establish the impact factor for the TAJ, which will further serve the needs of our academic and research members and thereby extend the credibility of transactional analysis in certain professional circles.

My setting aside ongoing editing of the TAJ will free my time for my new role as the editor of the Routledge "Innovations in Transactional Analysis" book series, which is open to members of the transactional analysis community worldwide. It is the intention of this book series to welcome new and innovative authors of theory and practice—to expand, challenge, and critique our theories and methodologies.

As I leave my editorial position with the TAJ, I look back on many years of deep satisfaction. Being an editor has improved my own work as a writer. Being an editor of this journal has provided me with many opportunities to interface with authors around the world. Being an editor has afforded me the opportunity to witness and support the growth and vitality of transactional analysis. It has been a true privilege.

New TAJ Theme Issue Announced

"What Went Wrong and Why? Cathexis Theory and Reparenting Reexamined"

Coeditors William F. Cornell and Diana Deaconu

It has been 40 years since the ITAA revoked the membership and training rights of Jacqui Schiff. Formal training within the Cathexis and reparenting model soon faded from view and largely disappeared from the more well-known institutes, workshops, and conferences. There have been some articles in the Transactional Analysis Journal analyzing/critiquing this approach (most notably Jacobs, 1994), but overall, the Cathexis crisis was followed by decades of silence. This silence prevented the potential growth and evolution of a reparenting model that is the product of professional discourse. As we become increasingly aware of the consequences of silence and secrets within our theoretical and therapeutic models (Dimen, 2016; Harris, Kalb, & Klebanoff, 2016; Stuthridge & Rowland, in press) in the transgenerational transmission of trauma within a community, it seems well past time that we as transactional analysts face head on the meanings and lingering consequences of the history of the Cathexis model and the work of Jacqui Schiff and her colleagues in TA history and technique. We are calling for papers to articulate and examine the clinical, ethical, and legal issues connected to the Cathexis and reparenting models in transactional analysis. Please follow the submission guidelines found here and send all manuscripts to TAJ Managing Editor Robin Fryer by 1 November 2020.

Welcome!

Vann Joines

Lucy Freedman

As cochairs of the 2019 joint conference, and on behalf of Southeast Institute, USATAA, and ITAA, we are immensely pleased to invite you to cocreate "Promoting Equality and OKness: Healing the Divisions in Our World," in Raleigh, North Carolina, USA, 31 July–3 August.

This theme is true to the founding principles of the Southeast Institute for Group and Family Therapy, which began in 1969 as the Fellowship for Racial and Economic Equality. The healing of interpersonal and societal trauma lies at the heart of both personal and social change. We want you to be here with us as we learn, teach, and celebrate the uniqueness and worth of everyone.

Our goals are to apply transactional analysis in our lives and across the four disciplines of transactional analysis to create a world that affirms everyone's OKness—not in spite of, but because of, our differences.

The scientific program and keynotes include notable activists and authors from within and outside of the TA community, echoing our commitment to be inclusive and innovative. The postconference institutes are about making our commitments real in schools, therapy offices, organizations, counseling practices, and communities.

We hope you will submit a proposal before 31 January to present what is most alive for you now as a contribution to the evolution that is so needed today. And we look forward to greeting you personally in Raleigh next summer.

Vann Joines and Lucy Freedman, Conference Cochairs

Keynote Speakers

Dr. Valerie Batts, vice president of training and development of VISIONS Inc.

Dr. Graham Barnes, founder of the Fellowship for Racial and Economic Equality, which later became the Southeast Institute for Group and Family Therapy

Rokelle Lerner, author of The Object of My Affection Is in My Reflection: Coping with Narcissists

Strategic Design for TA Innovation: Finding New Ways to Heal

with Sari van Poelje

Let's kickstart innovation of TA applications using the principles of design thinking! I became interested in design thinking several years ago. My consultancy work is focused mainly on helping businesses innovate their business practices as quickly as they innovate their products. I have clients all over the world, mainly multinationals, family businesses, and start-ups that want to change their leadership, customer relationships, innovation processes, and cooperation styles to suit the world today. I was looking for a way to free up creativity and innovative thinking in a world dominated by rationality and linear thinking. In TA terms, I work a lot with an excess of Adult, Normative Parent, and Adapted Child energy. But to become innovative, businesses have to tap into Free Child and Rebellious Child thinking framed by Nurturing Parent perspectives on their customers. Design thinking comes from a tradition of industrial design in the 1950s, which has been generalized to social issues in the last 10 years. Within design thinking, we use an iterative, client-focused approach to find solutions for ambiguous issues. Our starting point is that we have to deeply understand our customers to be able to find the real problem and innovative solutions. It is human-centered, playful, visual, focused on learning by doing, and wicked problem solving. A bit like TA. In this postconference workshop, we will use the design thinking process to create new TA products and services for our customers. By the end of our time together, you will understand design thinking, have applied the principles to better understand TA clients, and use client profiling to create new innovative products and services within TA. The workshop is experiential, framed by plenary theory discussions. The workshop will be given in English.

Creating Community in the Face of Economic and Racial Distress: When Life Does Not Support an "I'm OK-You're OK" Position

with William F. Cornell

The vast majority of people living on the planet today do not live under conditions that support an "I'm OK, You're OK" life position. Eric Berne wrote about life positions on one, and only one, occasion, in 1962, as a preliminary and unfinished effort to classify the underlying motivations for games. The concept of life positions was later taken up by Thomas Harris, Franklin Ernst, and Claude Steiner and was gradually transformed into a slogan of ideals and values within transactional analysis. When does the idealization of "I'm OK, You're OK" form a kind of tyranny and a turning away from the ugliness and despair in the lives of many? How do we as counselors, therapists, educators, and consultants work with individuals and social groups whose life circumstances foster a not-OK position? How do we communicate respect and acceptance of a not-OK position? How do we as professionals bring (or not bring) this alleged TA ideal into our work? In this postconference workshop, we will take time to explore and critically examine the relevance of "I'm OK/You're OK" in our work. For the past 15 years I have been living in a marginalized, racially diverse (although predominantly African-American), economically distressed community. I have been a member of the community group devoted to the safety and revitalization of the neighborhood, to which the building of affordable housing has been a key. It is the responsibility of this board to identify and represent the priorities of the residents and oversee the paid staff. For the past several years, I have served as president of the board. This workshop will be based on what I have learned through my work with my community. We will focus on the complexities of living in a racially diverse and economically distressed neighborhood, the resistances to change, the forces of overt and covert racism, and the efforts to support agency (in contrast to "OKness"). Aspects of cultural scripting that foster racism and classism will be examined. Active participation will be encouraged through small group and full group discussions.

William F. Cornell, MA, TSTA-P, is in independent private practice. He studied behavioral psychology at Reed College in Portland, Oregon, and phenomenological psychology at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. He followed his graduate studies with training in transactional analysis and body-centered psychotherapy. Since those trainings, Bill has studied with several mentors and consultants within psychoanalytic perspectives. He introduced and edited The Healer's Bent: Solitude and Dialogue in the Clinical Encounter, the collected papers of James T. McLaughlin, and Intimacy and Separateness in Psychoanalysis, the collected papers of Warren Poland. A coeditor of the Transactional Analysis Journal, Bill is the author of Explorations in Transactional Analysis: The Meech Lake Papers (TA Press), Somatic Experience in Psychoanalysis and Psychotherapy: In the Expressive Language of the Living (Routledge), Self-Examination in Psychoanalysis and Psychotherapy: Countertransference and Subjectivity in Clinical Practice (Routledge), At the Interface of Transactional Analysis, Psychoanalysis, and Body Psychotherapy: Theoretical and Clinical Perspectives (Routledge), Une Vie Pour Etre Soi (Payot), and is a coauthor and editor of Into TA: A Comprehensive Textbook (Karnac). He has also written numerous articles and book chapters. Bill is a recipient of the Eric Berne Memorial Award and the European Association for Transactional Analysis Gold Medal, both in recognition of his writing.

Lies, Deception, Passive-Aggressive Behavior, Unrelenting Hostility: Stimulating Change with Tough Couples Problems

with Ellyn Bader and Peter Pearson

Many challenging issues stymie couples therapists, including deception and lies to a partner and to you; passive aggressive behavior; and unrelenting hostility with no motivation for change. Untangling the web of deception, replacing passive-aggressive behavior with action and motivation, and shifting hostility in early sessions are all necessary for sustained change in entrenched couples. In this one-day interactive workshop, Drs. Ellyn Bader and Peter Pearson will use their developmental model to demonstrate how to intervene incisively and support the developmental growth of each partner. You will start the day by seeing a live role-play demonstration of a first session with a hostile/angry couple and learn to stimulate collaboration without asking why the couple is asking for therapy or how you can help them. You will see how to gracefully shift unmotivated partners into embracing self-change rather than partner rehabilitation. Your confidence will grow during the day as you learn to integrate attachment theory, differentiation, and neuroscience with your next round of tough clients. In this fast-paced day, you will learn how to inspire motivation in unmotivated partners, identify a continuum of lies and skillfully confront deception, build motivation after infidelity, and integrate the intrapsychic impasses of passive-aggressive partners and learn to interrupt the overfunctioning of their spouses. You will take away innovative and practical approaches as you spend the day with the cofounders of The Couples Institute. You will get the benefit of their experience specializing with couples since 1984.

Ellyn Bader, PhD, and Peter Pearson, PhD, are the founders of The Couples Institute, the creators of the developmental model of couples therapy, and authors of In Quest of the Mythical Mate: A Developmental Approach to Diagnosis and Treatment in Couples Therapy (now in its 17th printing). They have been active in the ITAA for many years. Ellyn is a past president, served on the board of trustees, and chaired the training and standards committee. Peter served on the board of trustees and edited The Script. *Ellyn's online training program includes instruction on redecision therapy and many other practical topics, and it is especially designed for distant therapists. An Introduction to Educational Transactional Analysis

with Giles Barrow

The purpose of this postconference institute is to provide an introduction to the field of educational transactional analysis. If you are involved in the task of education, then there will be plenty to interest you. For those working in formal education, schooling, community learning, or adult training, we will be considering theory and practice informed by TA. Teachers, trainers, parents, and students are all welcome to come and explore this distinctive field of TA application. In the workshop, Giles will offer an overview of learning imagoes (Napper & Newton, 2015) and the learning continuum (Barrow, 2007) in developing educational purpose and identity. He will also introduce the health system, a positive integrated framework of TA models (Newton, 2007).

Giles Barrow, TSTA-E, has been involved in education for over 30 years, starting out as a mainstream teacher, then specializing in provision for students excluded from school. He currently works and writes on the themes of relational aspects of teaching, learning, school leadership, and culture. He also runs a small farm in rural England.

This conference will feature a uniquely exciting, progressive, social-action-oriented TA 101 presented by a small, diverse group of certified instructors. Valerie Batts, Felipe Garcia, and Vann Joines will conduct a TA 101 course on Tuesday and Wednesday before the conference. This special course presents TA core concepts and philosophical principles as they can be applied to social and cultural changes, equity, diversity, and inclusiveness. In recent historical moments, we are keenly aware of the relevance and usefulness of sociocultural applications in transactional analysis core theory and principles.

Save on the registration fee by signing up for the 101 at the same time as the conference. 12 hours continuing education credit will be offered.

Dr. Batts and Mr. Garcia received the 2018 Robert and Mary Goulding Social Justice Award for their multilevel social justice initiatives toward racial and gender equality, peace, and cultural awareness as well as their significant theoretical contributions. Vann Joines received the Eric Berne Memorial Award for integration of TA with other theories. He remains a proponent of the Southeast Institute's work for racial, economic, and social equity as a director and psychologist for over 40 years, including nurturing the conference's thematic integration of social action with quality scientific programming.

located in the heart of downtown Raleigh, the hotel was remodeled this year. It offers a coffee shop, restaurant, and bar. You may also choose to walk to a nearby locally owned restaurant. In addition, the hotel has a pool and a gym.

Raleigh Area

Raleigh, North Carolina, is considered a southeastern United States hub of arts and entertainment. The area is home to three top universities that are known for much more than their basketball rivalries. The area is rich in culture and cutting-edge businesses. While you are here, you can count on taking in a small—or large—venue music concert, a visit to a local family-friendly art museum, or a walk through a nearby park.

The hotel is located in the heart of downtown Raleigh, offering access to attractions such as the Red Hat Amphitheatre, Walnut Creek, Marbles Kids Museum, Duke Energy Center for the Performing Arts, the North Carolina Museum of History, the North Carolina Museum of Natural Sciences, and Dorothea Dix Park.

Those of you who are considering extending your trip beyond Raleigh may go in any direction. Head east to one of our nearby beaches, such as Nags Head, Wrightsville Beach, or Bald Head Island. If you venture north, you can get to Washington DC in 4.5 hours to take in our capital city. Travel west and you will come on the Appalachian Mountains, home to Asheville and other beautiful towns. Go south to get to historic cities such as Charleston, South Carolina, and smaller charming beaches like Edisto Beach.

Call for Examiners

CTA and TSTA Exams will be held in Raleigh, North Carolina, USA, on 30–31 July 2019 just prior to the Southeast Institute/USATAA/ITAA Conference. The certification process is the very cornerstone for the candidates, and they will end their journey as a CTA or PTSTA. The can only do that with your help. Planning ahead, we are looking for new and experienced examiners. To be an examiner you need one of these certification levels: CTA, PTSTA, or TSTA. If you are coming to Raleigh and are a CTAT (CTA-Trainer, EATA), you are welcome as well. Your support and help for the CTA exams will be appreciated.

If you are interested in ITAA's certification process but do not have one of theses certifications, you are also welcome and might participate as a supervisee and/or audience in the TSTA exams.

There is no need to respond immediately. In the next Script and via mail to all members, we will ask again via an online questionnaire. We appreciate you coming forward and contributing to ITAA members becoming certified!
